

Parental Information Sway

Throughout a child & young person's time at nursery and school the adults working with them will routinely be reviewing their progress and considering their support needs. Every child & young person may need a little bit of support at some point and this is usually provided through learning and teaching in the nursery or class. (This is called universal support.) It is only when a child requires something different from other children that a staged intervention approach may be used.

Through talking with parents we have created a version of our stages of intervention which is from the view point of the child and family to help create a common understanding between all adults working to support the child. This sway takes you through that version and will hopefully give you a better understanding of the process and what it means for your child.

Stages of Intervention Parent Information Sway

D&G Stages of Intervention - Parent Information

