APPEALING A DECISION

If we (the Local Authority) are considering rejecting either an initial application for a site licence, an application to renew an existing site licence or an application to transfer an existing site licence then we will give the applicant notice:

- stating that we are considering refusing the application;
- giving the reason(s) why we are considering refusal;
- informing the applicant that they have a right to make written representations.

We will give a date by which the applicant must submit any representations. This date will be at least 28 days after the date on which the notice is given. The time provided for representations to be received, or the time taken (if shorter), does not count towards the 3 months a local authority has to make its decision.

If an applicant makes representations (for example by sending in further information or arguments) we must consider them. The time taken to do this is part of the 3-month time limit an authority has to make its decision on an application. If, after considering the representations, we decide not to approve the application we will:

- tell the applicant we have decided to refuse the application;
- give our reasons for refusal on the same day we tell the applicant of our decision;
- tell the applicant that they can appeal, and how to do so;
- tell the applicant how long they have to lodge an appeal.

If we refuse an application for an initial grant of a site licence or for renewal of an existing site licence the applicant can appeal the decision to the Sheriff.

If we refuse an application to transfer an existing site licence the applicant (the person who currently holds the licence) and/or the transferee (the person who wants to become the holder of the licence) can appeal the decision to the Sheriff
